- Material: Aramid Fiber 600D
- 600D: The "D" stands for "denier", a unit of measurement used to describe the thickness or density of fibers. Specifically, denier is defined as the weight in grams of 9,000 meters of a particular fiber. A higher denier number generally means the fiber is thicker and stronger. In this context, "600D" suggests that the aramid fiber used has a denier rating of 600, making it a medium-thick and durable material.
